Groucho Marx

as we see it

According to some reasonably round figures recently compiled, it will cost a sponsor about $3,000,000 to keep a half-hour network program on the air throughout the coming season. The rates on hour-long shows are somewhat higher.

Since all but a few hours of network time already are sold out for the fall, it is evident that, even at those prices, sponsors must feel that television advertising is worthwhile. This, despite the fact that viewers tend to criticize many commercials for being too high-pressure, too loud or too repetitious.

Still, results indicate that television advertising does make us buy. One recent survey showed that once a TV set comes into a home, buying in that home switches to products plugged on television. The average TV-advertised brand of merchandise registered a 33 percent purchase increase among new set buyers.

That is why sponsors are not averse to plunking down $3,000,000 or more for a season on television. For most of them, it pays off in added sales.

All this is certainly good news for the television industry, which in a few short years has become a front-ranking advertising medium. But with the good news comes the industry's added responsibility to viewers—responsibility to see that commercials are kept on a high level.

Only constant effort on the part of sponsors, networks and stations will make it possible to continue the effective impact of TV advertising. If many commercials become too loud, too strident or too frequent, the goose that lays the golden egg could easily start laying another kind of egg.

The Marx Man's Targets

GROUCHO PREFERS BEAUTIES, POLITICIANS;
VETOES ACTORS, REPORTERS, AUCTIONEERS

◀ Groucho likes them, so pretty girls—like beauty contest runner-up Jean Moorhead—are frequent guests on his show.

In publishing circles they tell of a shrewd operator who studied the best-seller lists and decided the most consistent money-makers were books about Lincoln, doctors and dogs. So he sat down and wrote a book called "Lincoln's Doctor's Dog."

This gentleman would have been a fine candidate for producer of a TV show called You Bet Your Life. With his formula he'd have a head start in producing six new straight men each week for Groucho Marx.

Health, dogs and the Great Emancipator are three of the subjects in which Groucho's TV-radio audience of 40,000,000 has expressed untiring interest in the eight years (counting radio) he has been on the air. But money, sex, babies and food also are sure-fire.

"Ideally," says Bernie Smith, co-director of the John Guedel production and talent scout for Groucho, "we are looking for a sexy relative of Abraham Lincoln's who made a lot of money raising dogs and now spends it trying to improve her health by eating baby food."

No one fulfilling this ideal has turned up among the 1800 contestants who have paired off opposite Groucho, but school teachers, says Smith, have come closest.

"We've had more teachers on the program than any other occupation. For one thing, a lot of them are good looking, and we always have at least one pretty girl on the show. We try to put her on first in order to wake Groucho up. Also, school teachers know a lot about Lincoln; some have babies; most have pets—and nearly all have budgets."

Actors, on the other hand, make the poorest contestants. "Modest, warm, outgoing personalities are best," Smith has found. "Show people, we've learned, are always 'on'. It takes the play away from Groucho, and he's the one that people want to see perform. Newspapermen are lousy, too. They're smart, but introverts, and extroverts seem to work out best. Auctioneers are extroverts, but they don't come off too well, I suppose because auctioneers are basically actors."

By now, the road to Groucho's jackpot—which twice has amounted to $6000—is pretty well traveled. Sanskrit songwriters, lady mountain climbers, champion hog callers and other citizens of distinction flock, year round, to the Guedel office in Los Angeles, Cal. From continued their ranks have come such show-stoppers as "Boots" Bootzin, "the singing fruit peddler," who confessed he ate grass for his eyesight.

"So that," deduced Groucho, "is why cows don't wear glasses!"

Many of the show's best straight men, however, appear by invitation. Smith and his staff comb the yellow pages of the telephone directory, looking for offbeat occupations, and more than one contestant has received a phone call or telegram after he got his name in the papers.

Public officials and war heroes usually display warm responsiveness, and are always in demand as contestants. Politics aside, Smith could hardly wait for Harry Truman to step down as President, but Truman regretfully turned down his invitation. Gen. Omar Bradley phoned the Guedel office for tickets during a visit to Los Angeles, was cornered in the audience by Smith, and promised to appear on a later show.

Five of the weekly contestants are selected several weeks in advance. Applicants fill out a "secret" questionnaire, which includes this question: "What would you do if you won $1000?" It's assumed that anyone eager to bank it would make pretty dull interview material for Groucho.

Although Marx doesn't see his victims until they are ushered onstage, he knows a great deal about them. Smith and others interview prospects, compiling information which is handed to Marx just before the show goes on.

"It's amazing," Smith says, "what Groucho can do with one little bit of information. If he knows, for instance, that a man was born a block from the Fulton Fish Market, he's got the basis for a dozen gags."

The sixth member of each week's three teams is selected from the audience. Two or three people with the same occupation are looked up in advance and asked to attend, but are not interviewed. They compete for audience applause in a quiz or a sketch, and the winner is sent into the ring with Groucho after a quick chat with Smith or Bob Dwan, the other co-director.

Some of the program's most amusing contestants have come from unexpected sources. Gonzales Gonzales, now a movie comedian, was recommended to Smith by a friend who watched him break up Walter O'Keefe's Double or Nothing as an amateur deadpan artist. Habitual quiz-show guests all have applications on file and one got on the show by admitting his unusual occupation: quiz-show contestant.

One week Groucho had a woman who had climbed higher mountains than any other woman, and four months later, a woman aqualung diver who had gone lower. "Now," he remarked, "all we need on this show is a woman who never did anything!"

Next week, he got 150 letters from women who had "never done anything"—never been kissed, never had an operation, never been anywhere. One of them wound up on the program—and spoiled her perfect record by winning $145.—Robert E. Johnson

TV Stretches A Finish Line

Closed-Circuit System Gives Every Fan A Choice Seat At New York Race Track

The hottest bet in racing circles today is Finiscope, a 20-by-30-foot screen at the head of the home stretch at Roosevelt Raceway, Westbury, L.I. On it, via closed-circuit TV, flash the trotters at the finish line, bringing to fans seated at the homestretch turn a clear picture of what's happening to their $2 bet. A TV camera, left, high above the clubhouse, feeds the picture to a projector, also left, thence to screen.

Rooting them home: fans, seated at the turn of Roosevelt Raceway's home stretch, excitedly watch finish on Finiscope. Without it, they'd have only tail-end view.

Star For A Night

A Young Actress Gets Her First Top Billing —For 30 Minutes On TV

Her day begins: while roommate Ailene Thomas spruces, Anne listens to recording.

Star Tonight is the magic carpet that whisks aspiring young actors to stardom—but only for one night. The program, a series of half-hour live dramas on ABC, gives these hopefuls their first star billing, in plays written especially for them or chosen to fit their talents.

Anne Edwards, for example, got her chance one Thursday night in Rod Serling's "Strength of Steel," in which she played a young Army widow.

Anne had been spotted originally by Helen Hayes while a University of North Carolina drama student. From campus, Miss Edwards became an understudy in the Chicago company of "The Moon Is Blue"—and never got on the stage.

She then became a stand-in for Miss Hayes—and never appeared before an audience.

Finally, for a year she tested stunts for Beat The Clock—and didn't get on the air.

Then came Star Tonight.

She awaits cue to face cameras...

... in scene with Frederic Tozere.

Director Alan Anderson coaches her.

Anne enters her dressing room, which was marked that night by magic star.

Red Foley and boys: city folks dig it, too.

'Tain't Hillbilly, Neighbor!

It's 'Country Music' That's Making A Splash On TV

Do-si-do: The Tadpoles go in for square-dancing with abandon on Ozark Jubilee.

◀ Foggy River Boys: they started with Red on 'Grand Ole Opry.'

Red Twangs 'Git-tar' As Well As Sings

Ever wonder which show attracts the widest family circle to the TV set each week? Wal, now, it's that li'l ole Ozark Jubilee that you don't hear so much about but that sure does pack in the country-music fans, on Saturday nights. (Country, that is—not hillbilly, if you please!)

According to the American Research Bureau, Jubilee has 28 percent more people per set watching it than the average of all evening shows. In other words, it appeals to Grampaw and all the tads, too.

Heading the hoe-downers is Red Foley, star of radio's "National Barn Dance" and "Grand Ole Opry," and a top country-music recording artist. The cast includes such favorites as Jean Shepard, Hawkshaw Hawkins, Tommy Sosebee, Oklahoma Wranglers, Bud Isaac and the Foggy River Boys.

Jubilee was launched last Jan. 22 from University of Missouri's KOMU-TV, Columbia, but moved to Springfield, Mo.—"The Crossroads of Country Music." And though it isn't in the Top 10, it snared enough fans for ABC to up its original hour-long format to 90 minutes this summer.

What's more, there's a wave of country-music programs joining oldtimers. ABC already has launched The Pee Wee King Show and Talent Roundup (aspiring country artists), and this fall it will present, live, the most famous of them all—Grand Ole Opry!

Three 'Git-tar' Players With A Fiddler Thrown In

Our magic carpet zooms Westward from Ozark country to the blue Pacific and glides to a halt in glamorous Hollywood. There an ever-alert TV GUIDE photographer snaps a group of gaily clad natives, who welcome us with stirring strains of "You Are My Sunshine." Natives include Gene Autry of Tioga, Tex., George Gobel of Chicago, Ill., Preston Foster of Pitman, N.J. and Jack Benny (with violin) of Waukegan, Ill.

Garroway

Myers

Chicago Dateline

Dave Garroway, one-time monarch of Chicago TV with his local-flavored Garroway at Large, brings his entire Today troupe to Chicago Thursday, Sept. 1, for an origination from the Powerama site on Chicago's lakefront.

Dan Belloc, a fast-rising young band leader, has been contracted by TV GUIDE to play all five shows at the Park Forest TV GUIDE Television Jamboree, Sept. 15-24. Also booked for the Jamboree are vocalists Bette Chapel and Nancy Evans.

Howard Miller sinks his roots deeper as a stellar TV star with a rash of new shows lined up for the fall. Currently the writer, producer, director and star of a two-hour Friday night offering, Howard will add another two-hour stanza to his TV schedule. His new show, which is already sold, will feature a fresh format. CBS execs are also urging him to present a daily half-hour strip resembling his old Close Up format, but Howard fears possible overexposure.

The exodus of Chicago network shows to New York is sometimes faster than the lines of communication. Ch. 5's management was asked recently why the Mr. Wizard station wagon had been taking up space in the net's New York parking area, only to be reminded that Don Herbert had moved his show to NBC New York and, in fact, had already set up offices in Radio City. In an aura of big names it appears easy to become lost.

June Myers, who made her television debut on the late-evening Tom Duggan stanzas, will return for the month of October. The pert Australian beauty is making her fourth appearance, an all-time record among Duggan's Girl Fridays. Reggie Dombeck, Miss Photoflash of last year, steps in for the month of September.

Win Stracke has been offered a role in a Broadway musical. However, no definite word of acceptance has come from the hero of the young set, as he is reluctant to give up his local shows, Time for Uncle Win and Visiting Uncle Win. Quite a storm brewed among Chicagoans the last time he left the scene.

Jim Moran has just penned his name to a contract which calls for another year with WBKB, beginning Sept. 2. A long-time Chicago favorite, Jim has been with the station since Mar. 3, 1950.

A Packed Briefcase

It's refreshing to view a show as original and relaxed as Studs Terkel's Briefcase each Sunday night. His is the only show on the scene that gives viewers true Chicago-style variety. The hour is full of diverse, pleasant entertainment, ranging from high-brow to jazz of an exceptionally high caliber. We in the Windy City should champion Studs' cause.—Janis Riley, Chicago.

Daily Double Scratched

I enjoyed the program, Daily Double, with June Myers and Jack Drees very much and am wondering what happened to it. I note that Jack still has his nightly sports show, but June has been dropped. Could you please tell me what she is doing now. We miss seeing her on television and hope she returns soon.—Bob Wright, Chicago. [The sponsor contract expired and was not renewed. June is currently doing photographic modeling.—ED.]

Not The Marrying Kind

I read in the paper that Tom Duggan and Judy Jones were going to be married. Could you please tell me if this is true?—K. Bohm, Waukegan, Ill. [No truth to statement.—ED.]

Band Theme

I have listened to America's Greatest Bands all summer and have enjoyed it very much. But what I would like to know is more about the theme song of that show; its name, its recorder and if it can be purchased. It's a beautiful song.—Lorna Robinson, Winamac, Ind. [It is a Jackie Gleason original, titled "Alone in a Crowd," written by Coben and Gleason. It is available in record stores.—ED.]

SPECIAL According to an oncient Greek legend, Pygmolion, King of Cyprus, hoted women. But he created a beautiful statue of Venus and fell in love with it. In answer to his prayers, the goddess made it come to life.

But the setting of tanight's musical comedy is not ancient Greece; it is contemparory U.S.A. And our hera is not royalty but a humble borber named Rodney Hatch, who has bought an engagement ring for his bride-to-be. On a whim he slips the ring onto the finger of a statue af Venus and lo, this statue comes to life. What's more, Venus falls in love with Rodney, charms him and breoks up his forthcoming marriage.

Tonight's 90-minute production recently completed o two-week engagement at the Dallas State Fair. The show originally opened 12 years ago on Broadway with Mary Mortin as Venus, Kenny Baker as Rodney. In the movie, Ava Gardner ployed the goddess ond Robert Walker her worshiper.

5 4 BOXING—New York

Carmelo Costa, Brooklyn, N.Y., vs. Bobby Bell, Youngstown, O., featherweights, 10 rounds. Jimmy Powers reports from Madison Square Garden.

TV GUIDE RATINGS

	Rating	Bouts	W	L	D	KO's
Costa	4	32	26	2	4	3
Bell	Unrated	61	36	21	4	5

Last winter, Bell scored an upset triumph over Costa. Costa will be out to reverse the decision in convincing fashion. Bell is a shifty, ring-wise veteran. Costa is a sensational boxer with plenty of heart and stamina. A good win by Costa could put him in line for a shot at Sandy Saddler's title.

This Is Where We Came In!

Why Old Movies Are Run Again And Again And Again

Some of the most familiar faces on the silver screen today belong to people who haven't been seen in the Brown Derby for years. They are people like John Barrymore, Signe Hasso, Warner continued

Robert Donat, Elissa Landi in 'Monte Cristo.'

Leigh, Olivier in 'That Hamilton Woman.'

Young James Cagney: 'Johnny Come Lately.'

Oland, Sidney Toler, Veronica Lake, Henry Armetta.

They don't hardly make that kind no more.

The reason these faces are so familiar is that TV channels are swimming these nights with old movies (vintage 1929 to 1950). These include everything from "Pygmalion" to "1,000,000 Years B.C." (that's the name of the picture, not the date of its release)—and just about every star who left an imprint on the hallowed concrete in front of Grauman's Chinese Theater.

This roster may soon include even Mary Pickford, who hasn't been seen on television very often as yet (not having made a movie in 22 years). Now Mary is reported to have received bids from TV distributors on all her old silent films.

As a conservative guess, old movies take up more than half of the time the average American TV station devotes to local—as contrasted to network—programs. And many stations book old films on some 25 to 30 percent of their entire program schedule.

These films run all through the day. A single station in the New York area splatters the air with 50 different movies every week—and more than 1500 separate bookings a year, including reruns. This station's daily schedule is built around four movies running an average of 80 minutes apiece. In addition, the station offers a 90-minute Breakfast Show on Saturday mornings (to keep the children entertained while parents snooze) and a Sunday afternoon movie, too.

William C. Lacey, who is manager of the WCBS-TV Film Department in New York, always communes earnestly with himself before he picks the four films he exhibits every day. He thinks each show should be aimed at a specific audience.

For his Late Matinee (5-6 P.M., Monday through Friday), Lacey likes romantic adventure stories ("Salome," with Yvonne De Carlo; "Outpost to Morocco," with George Raft), liberally pruned with the editor's shears.

Lacey's Early Show (6:15-7:25 P.M., Monday through Friday) is designed for "family" viewing. This means films like "It's a Wonderful Life," with James Stewart, and "Glory at Sea," with Sonny Tufts.

For his Late Show (11:15 P.M., Monday through Friday) Lacey aims at an "adult" audience. For these viewers he leans to high adventure, romance and an occasional dash of gore ("Gung Ho," with Randolph Scott; "Smash-Up," with Susan Hayward; "Magnetic Monster," with Richard Carlson). The most popular of all Late Shows was, surprisingly, Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion," which ran 14 times on four channels in New York during a single year.

A record was established by Lacey several years ago when he bought 20 mildewed "Charlie Chan" mysteries. He ran them six times apiece for a grand total of 120 exposures—or so often that he began to see Charlie lurking in the corners every time he went out for a drink at the water cooler.

Most outspoken audience is composed of the people who watch Lacey's Late Late Show, which takes off at about 12:30 A.M. nightly and runs on toward the dawn. The Late Late Show has a "house" of 292,607 shipyard workers, cab drivers, firemen, waitresses, bartenders, short-order cooks in all-night cafeterias, invalids and people who just can't sleep. When the show was dropped a year or so ago for want of a sponsor, this powerful chorus set up a wail that rocked the studio. Station officials grumblingly put it back.

Among the most popular shows aired by local outlets at NBC have been "The Count of Monte Cristo" (1934), "Street Scene" (1933), "The Last of the Mohicans" (1936) and "1,000,000 Years B.C." (1940).

"Monte Cristo" drew such a happy response when first shown that it was shown again—and then 12 times more. Next followed "The Son of Monte Cristo," "The Wife of Monte Cristo" and the "Sword of Monte Cristo." "If we ever land 'The Mother-in-Law of Monte Cristo,'" says George Vales, who books films for WRCA-TV, "we might even outdraw Dragnet."

Why are ancient movies run so often? Well, they're popular; and for the amount of money they cost, there's no more profitable type of programming. Late films on WCBS-TV, for example, on an average cost considerably less than Steve Allen's competing Tonight, yet the ratings are almost equal.

The gripes are plentiful, of course. People get irascible late at night. Dissonant fans complain about (1) the fact that the movies are rerun too often, (2) the length of the commercials and (3) the poor quality of the films. ("If you show 'The Bowery Boys' once more," a fan once informed a film booker, "I'll stink-bomb the studio.")

Sometimes the viewers complain about the age of the movies (although all film buyers insist their pictures are only moderately ancient). Paradoxically, some fans sound off because the movies aren't old enough. They want to see Rudolph Valentino, William S. Hart, Theda Bara.

And, of course, Mary Pickford.—Frank De Blois

Dese, Dem And Dose Dolls

'Damon Runyon Theater' Discovers They're Hard To Find

Show business should be the easiest place in the world to find the kind of guys and dolls to play the kind of guys and dolls called for by The Damon Runyon Theater. For reasons utterly perplexing to the show's producers, however, such people are not growing plentifully on show-business trees.

The big problem has been finding the dolls, such as the four shown on these pages. Generally speaking, the Runyon Doll is a luscious dame with a heart of gold, who is forever trying to get her larceny-minded guy to go straight. Additionally, she must have the flavor of a Brooklyn-Bronx accent, and that's the stickler.

There's not a voice coach in Hollywood that the Runyon Theater casting director isn't ready to shoot right through the heart—for they're the ones, apparently, who teach the starlets their broad A's. And who wants a cultured doll?

◀Marilyn Erskine: she fills the bill.

Adele Jergens: born in Brooklyn.

Jean Lewis: from Texas but can speak Bronx.

'And Here's The Show'

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

Like fellow comedians Jackie Gleason and Sid Caesar, George Gobel decided to produce his own summer replacement. A good warm-weather substitute can keep the customers in the habit of tuning in same time, same station. This idea has merit, but unfortunately, the same can't be said for the Gobel replacement, And Here's the Show. An uninspired half hour of variety entertainment, it burdens good performers with bad material.

Frequent visitor Jonathan Winters turned down an offer to appear each week, reportedly because he felt he was not yet ready to headline a weekly show. He was right. He's a talented comedian with a unique flair for mimicry, but some of his material has been woefully weak.

Ransom Sherman, who appears regularly, shares Winters' gag problem. Sherman does best with subtle, whimsical humor, but his script requires frequent and unfunny detours.

Zany Ransom Sherman ponders crazy, mixed-up coiffure for Kay O'Grady.

In heralding the series, Gobel indicated he wanted to give new talent the kind of break he himself received several summers back on Saturday Night Review. He evidently thought Winters would be the principal beneficiary of this policy. Instead, the Double Daters, a two-boy and two-girl song-and-dance team, seem most likely to be remembered. Personable and highly versatile youngsters, they alone have shown the flash and sparkle required for frequent wintertime encores.

Gobel assigned his regular orchestra leader, John Scott Trotter, to watch the store for him during the summer. But even Trotter, an amusing Gobel foil, doesn't come off well in these surroundings. And the guest variety acts spotlighted each week often look like rejects from Toast of the Town and the Colgate Variety Hour.

Oh, well, summer doesn't last forever.

Bill Leyden quizzes (from l.) Bobby Troup, Denise Darcel, Mel Blanc and Johnny Mercer.

Musical Chairs

The panel-type quiz show has been done, redone and overdone to such a degree on TV that the success of any new entry depends strictly on the appeal of its panelists. Musical Chairs' panel is an ingratiating one. So although there is nothing in the show to rate an award, it compares favorably with other summertime entries.

Bill Leyden is a bright emcee, fast with the ad libs and deft at repartee with the panel. The panel consists of songwriter Johnny Mercer; Mel Blanc, the voice of many animated cartoons, a recording artist and a member of Jack Benny's stable of stooges; orchestra leader Bobby Troup, and a different girl vocalist each week. The pretty visitors have included Denise Darcel, Helen O'Connell and June Christy. All have scored not only with quiz answers, but also with their own entertainment specialties.

The questions, based mostly on popular music, are interesting and permit the average viewer to play the game vicariously. And the idea of having the panelists sing or act out some of their answers provides pleasantly diverting entertainment.—R.S.

Television show proposed based on lives of famous female poisoners. A "Poison to Poison" show?

This is one writer who won't have any trouble with endings.

It provides ready-made plots, but they all come out the same way—feet first. This has been going on ever since Eve slipped Adam the apple. It sounds like the perfect show for a stomach-alkalizer sponsor: "Do you suffer from headaches? Nausea? Dizzy spells? Your still luckier than these guys!"

This will feature all of the famous Mickeys of history except Rooney.

It may revive that old song: "Who bought the cyanide in Mrs. Murphy's countryside?" One guy's only lucky break was that his bride didn't poison the wedding cake. He carried her across the threshold—then a couple of guys from the emergency squad carried him back out across it.

He had champagne at the wedding breakfast, but he had a real pain afterward.

The new show could have everything, including Mel Allen shouting "Going, going, gone!"

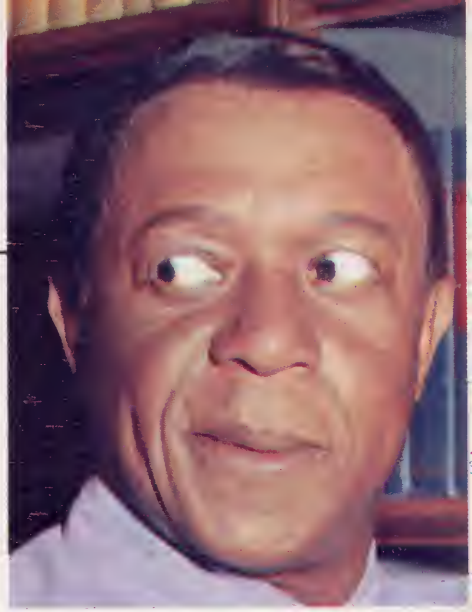
"I Love Lucrezia" will be for guys who went too fast for Medic.

Jack Benny's Man 'Rochester'

He's A Gravel-Voiced Comedian Who Rarely Uses His Real Name



On the Monday before Easter in 1937, five Negro actors assembled at NBC in Hollywood to audition for a part as a Pullman porter in a Jack Benny radio broadcast. The script called for Benny, en route from New York to Los Angeles, to fret about the time the train would reach Albuquerque, N. M. For answering his fussy inquiries with the information that there was not, and never had been, an Albuquerque, the porter was to receive $50, the standard fee for reading a few jokes on one show.

Of the five aspirants, one or two actually had worked on Pullmans, and four had portrayed porters. The part, however, fell to the fifth man, a stocky, gravel-voiced 31-year-old singer and dancer named Eddie Anderson, whose only connection with trains was that occasionally—while touring in musical reviews—he overslept and missed one.

Anderson's grunting of "Albuquerque! There you go again!" every time Benny stopped him in the aisle, drew such enthusiastic fan mail that he was brought into a later script as the waiter in a Western barroom, serving a tourist named Benny.

But Jack could not go on riding trains and dining out forever, so the writing staff (including Hilliard Marks, now associate producer of the Benny TV show) hit upon the device of moving Anderson into the Benny household. As Rochester Van Jones, a name concocted by Marks, Anderson became valet to the world-famous "miser."

Until then, the chief feather in his cap had been the role of Noah in Warners' 1935 version of "The Green Pastures"—"just a doll of a part," he recalls. But "Rochester" was to turn him into an American institution.

Just how well-known Eddie has become in the past 18 years is attested by the fact that no one uses his real name. To waiters at the Hollywood Brown Derby, he is "Mr. Rochester." When he signs an autograph, it is with a flowing "Rochester." On the Queen Elizabeth, en route to the London Palladium with the rest of the Benny troupe four years ago, titled Englishmen vied for the privilege of getting into snapshots with "Mr. Rochester —Jack Benny's man, y'know." And a few months ago, in San Francisco, Anderson was approached on the street by an Oriental citizen who peered at him and asked respectfully: "Mr. Lochester?"

Anderson is in the unique and contradictory position of being a domestic servant who makes upwards of $75,000 a year, a set of circumstances he sometimes appreciates most expansively. His wardrobe for that trip abroad in 1951, according to a member of the Benny company, was a sartorial delight—a change of costume for every event in the voyager's day. Eddie says he spent $25,000 on a custom-built sports car with which he once won a gold cup in a Chicago auto show. And, until two years ago, when his wife fell ill, he indulged a number of spectacular hobbies—a scale-model railroad in the basement of his four-bedroom-and-swimming-pool home in Los Angeles; a 36-foot cabin cruiser on which he made 500-mile fishing trips to Mexico; a private stable of nine horses which he raced at every track in the country until he sold them a few years ago.

One, Burnt Cork, ran in the 1943 Kentucky Derby, finishing last, a defeat soon avenged by another, False Clue, bought from Alfred Vanderbilt. One fine day at Del Mar, False Clue paid $239.40 for $2, a triumph that landed his owner in hot water with theatrical cronies. "I didn't know the horse was running," he says, "and when I walked in backstage, everybody like to cut me dead, because I didn't tell them."

One of four children, Anderson hawked newspapers and firewood on the streets of Oakland and San Francisco until, at 13, Fanchon and Marco discovered him singing for pennies in a hotel lobby. They put him in a vaudeville unit, but he toiled in many an obscure theatrical vineyard for the next 18 years. One road company he joined in 1924 had to pawn its scenery to meet a payroll of $1 a night for everybody, including the star.

Today Eddie shares his expansive Georgian house with his adopted son, Billy Anderson, and Billy's wife and baby daughter. The late Mrs. Anderson's son by a former marriage, Bill held the world's record for high and low hurdles before he became a professional end for the Chicago Bears.

Since his wife's death, Eddie has dropped the staff of servants he once maintained, as well as such one-time business interests as a share in a parachute factory. "With Mamie gone I'm sort of at loose ends," he says. "About the only thing I'm interested in is producing a Western movie with a Negro cast. I've got a script about a colored marshal who really existed. This isn't Gary-Cooper Western. It's history."

Parking Ticket Shocks Gleason; Jerry Lewis Soothes A Singer

NEW YORK . . . Jackie Gleason parked his pink car—a gift from his new sponsor—far enough away from a fire hydrant, he thought, to escape getting a parking ticket.
